PART-TIME PHOTOGRAPHER

1982-1984 The Villager, a local weekly, and New York Times.

EDUCATION – PHOTOGRAPHY – classes and/or workshops

1983-1985 André Kertész

1977-1978 Larry Sultan and Minnette Lehmann

1978 Roy DeCarava

1977 Garry Winogrand

1974 Occasional class at the college where I worked to learn to develop film and use an enlarger

1983-1985 Most especially, the many priceless hours spent with André Kertész, poring with him over boxes of his prints as we discussed them. He spent time and looked at my photographs as well. We photographed together in Washington Square Park. He made me dinner on my birthday and selected my portrait of him as the frontispiece for his final book. John Durniak, Director of Photography for the New York Times, used that portrait for his obituary and quoted me in it.

1978–1980 Helen Gee: took a class with her at The New School, New York, NY. She became a lifelong mentor and friend. In the 1950's Gee started Limelight, the first gallery devoted exclusively to photography. She wrote about it in her engrossing memoir, Limelight: A Greenwich Village Photography Gallery and Coffeehouse in the Fifties, University of New Mexico Press, 1997.

1978 Roy DeCarava: although not enrolled at Hunter College, New York, NY, or any college, after seeing a box of my 11 x 14 inch exhibition prints, he invited me to attend his class at Hunter for a semester and I gladly accepted and attended the entire, wonderful, semester.

1977–1978 Took a leave without pay from the “college” job, went to San Francisco and took one class with Larry Sultan and one with Minnette Lehmann, now 96 years old. The San Francisco Public Library is working with her to acquire her archive.

1977 Weekend workshop with Garry Winogrand, International Center of Photography, New York City. Remember verbatim what he said about what does and does NOT make a photograph “work.” This has informed and guided my approach to photography for 50 years.

1974 Attended an occasional class at the college where I worked, just to learn how to develop B&W film and use an enlarger

1974 Bought a camera, a Nikon SLR
